2.1 Máquina de Calcular

Crie a interface gráfica da seguinte máquina de calcular:

Associe as sentinelas necessárias de modo a que a ação de cada botão numérico seja escrever o respectivo número no mostrador.

2.2. Adicionador de botões

Make a Java application that initially shows a Window containing a single button. When the user presses the "Add new button" button, a new button should appear. You can use JButton.setForeground(Color.GREEN) and JButton.setBackground(Color.BLACK) to give the newly added button another appearance. The user should be able to continue adding buttons by pressing the initial button. When one of the newly added buttons is pressed, they should disappear. If the user for instance presses "Button 5", "Button 5" should disappear and the result should be the following:

Use the method `validate()` for the panel to lay out all its sub-components after adding or removing a button.

2.3 Cell selector

Create a Swing application that initially draws a grid with cells. Each cell should have a number. For a 20x10 board the application should look like this::

	Draw
0	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	15	16	17	18	19
20	21	22	23	24	25	26	27	28	29	30	31	32	33	34	35	36	37	38	39

Add a mouse listener that detects the cell where the user has pressed and marks it. Example of pressing cell 92:
